Oklahoma High Bush

—OR—

Tree Currant

THIS CURRANT is now being propagated by the Caldwell Nurseries. The original stock grows wild in Alfalfa County and has been noticed for years as being one of the largest and best varieties of Currants in the west. People go for miles every year to lay in a supply of these currants. The attention of the Caldwell Nurseries was called to its hardiness and bearing qualities and it has been much improved by cultivation. The cultivated plants are very scarce and we advise to get in your order as soon as you can. They will only be sold in lots of six to one customer this year. They are a very large black currant, grow in clusters and the bush often attains a height of four or five feet, making the fruit very easy to gather. The skin is not tough like other black currants and the fruit has a fine flavor.
